Do you have a student who is studying with a disability or mental health condition? Would they like to find out more about how to make a successful transition to tertiary study?

The transition from high school to university can be daunting, especially for students with a disability. To assist students thinking about or planning for this transition, RMIT's Equitable Learning Service is now offering personalised appointments for secondary school students and their families where they can speak directly with Hannah, one of our Equitable Learning Service advisors.

The appointments take place on Tuesdays from 4pm to 5pm and Wednesdays from 3pm to 5pm. They're currently running until the end of March.
